

MAKING BETTER

Make Good is Not Doing All That One Should.
is one thing better than to do, and that is to make the world; it has not simply good. We can see this if we how naturally we say, the finest sunset or cloud most glorious full moon. Of course this is not all true, but there is a greater difference—namely, that in here is something to do to make good that also seems to be doing better than be-mak good is not enough. The thing is seen in other No president ever went to for but that he honestly he could in some respects than the president before merely keep what had been and each president is righting this, for in this business as better each of us has to contribute that no one else. For ordinary people real encouragement to realize that no matter how many precede us, there is still us first to make good and make better. The way is just to ourselves to the thing we do. Ourself is a brand new "one else ever had it before who learns his lessons of a sense of duty only made good, so far as concerned, but the secret comes only to the ones because he has learned to enjoy it. The first good; the second makes better the second alone gets the of the game of securing us—George Lawrence Parke Nicholas.

SPINNING ASBESTOS.

One Thread a Hundred Yards in Length May Weigh an Ounce.

Asbestos was first mined in Italy, and prior to 1880 it was the only country that produced it at a profit. The Italian asbestos is very silky in appearance and gray to brown in color. Often the fibers are several feet in length.

Asbestos when leaving the spinning machine is sent to the spinning mill in large bobbins, about 100 pounds. Upon its arrival it is put into a carding machine and then the saw teeth run over it in cotton mill. This separates the tangled fibers, after which the spinning takes place off a roller spinning machine. When the asbestos leaves the spinning machine it is combed smoothly and the fibers are parallel to a uniform mass. This mass is treated in a roving spinning machine.

This first spins it into a coarse yarn and then draws and spins this yarn until it becomes fine and quite strong. Where a hard, strong thread is required for certain fabrics the asbestos yarn is put into a doubling and twisting machine where two or more of the yarn threads are combined. Of course the asbestos is to be impregnated with rubber a smooth, hard finished thread is not desirable.

The spinning of asbestos for a long time seemed of great difficulty owing to the manner in which the threads persisted in slipping past each other. Finally it was discovered that upon the microscope a thread of asbestos showed a notched surface and, by means of special twists, the spinning could be made successful. Now after much experimenting, manufacturers are able to spin a single asbestos thread of 200 yards in length not weighing over an ounce. India Rubber World.

Burglary in England

Burglary cannot be committed in the daytime. The English rule is that if there is light enough to see the face of the intruder there is no burglary. This, however, does not exclude moonlight, for a house-breaker entering after nightfall, however brightly the moon may be shining, is legally a burglar; that is, if it is reasonably certain that he has entered with the intent to commit felonies, for while a tramp breaking into a house to sleep may be a "homebreaker" he is not in the proper sense of the word a burglar. But burglary, however, may consist in breaking out as well as breaking in, for one who hides in a house before nightfall to steal and after stealing breaks out to get away is just as much a burglar as he who to effect the purpose breaks in.

A Long Walk

A professor of the University of Pennsylvania who has greatly endeared himself to the students on account of his kind heartedness has some particular feelings—that of abstemiousness, the Philadelphia Times relates.

He visited his married nephew and had listened to the young wife's graces of her newborn. The professor felt that he must say something to give the impression that he was interested.

"Can the dear little fellow walk?" he inquired quickly.

"Well," the mother should.

"Why he has been walking for five years!"

"Dear me!" the professor ex

Told Her Story

The little daughter of a man who had been chosen for duty in London the other day went to the judge and said: "Please sir, father won't come. He can't pull on his coat."

The judge asked the nervous little creature what was the matter with her father. Her lips trembled but she had not been sufficiently equipped for the complete deception of the very official. He repeated his question.

"Well, sir," she said, looking straight into the judge's twinkling eyes, "either don't wear boots. He's got wooden legs. I wasn't told to tell you anything else, sir, that's all."

Smuggling in Italy

The Italian laws against smuggling are most severe. A person caught with only a pound of contraband tobacco is pretty sure to incur a year's imprisonment, besides paying a heavy fine. The customs officials, too, are authorized to shoot persons crossing the frontier who refuse to halt when challenged, and several lives are thus sacrificed every year. Still the profits of smuggling are so great that many brave these perils. A knapsack filled with tobacco or salt, safely hidden, yields a small fortune to the smuggler, so long as the taxes upon tobacco

PNEUMONIA.
Its Best Friend Is a Bad Cold That Has Been Neglected

Pneumonia is not dreaded merely for its power to seize and kill quickly, but also for its apparent power to select the most unlikely victims. Most persons have lived through the shock of hearing that some friend had suddenly died of pneumonia—a friend from whom they had parted but a few days or even hours before, leaving him at what seemed the highest pitch of physical well being and perhaps protesting that he did not know what illness meant.

This disease is most dangerous to the apparently strong, robust people of heavy weight and hearty appetite, although it may attack any one for its gains are omnipresent.

The strong and full-blooded individual who is at the same time something overweight is especially in danger of pneumonia and should take particular care to avoid it. If his diet is too heavy—an I that may safely be assumed—it should be ruthlessly cut down, especially as to meat and the elimination of alcohol.

The weighing scale is a good friend to such a person and should be consulted regularly. The scale does not argue about that extra pound or two—it proves it—and after a weight in accordance with age and height has been determined it can be maintained in most cases by the exercise of a little self control.

There are hosts of people who indolently permit themselves to get heavy and even fat in the winter months. They are the people who should be constantly reminded, "The pneumonia germ 'll git yer if yer don't watch out!"

The condition of the man must be recognized as more important than the presence of the germ, as proved by the fact that there is less mortality among the thin and apparently delicate than among the stout and full-blooded.

Some of the phrases used by the laity on this subject have after all more sense than nonsense in them. It is said that some one is "threatened with pneumonia" or that a "bad cold ran into pneumonia," and in a sense it is true, for even one threatened with pneumonia, that is to say the germ is always present and ready and willing to do its work if one only gives it a chance.

The most successful way to give it a chance is to neglect a bad cold and cold were met with such a physique and fresh air it would depict in disgust and the lurking pneumonia with it, for the large burglar cannot get in through a hole which has refused to admit the smaller one.—Orth's Companion

Wicker Baskets

One of the largest imports from Russia into America is wicker clothes-baskets. The huge hamper so common in use are nearly all made in central Russia by peasants, although some come from the Danube valley and there is considerable domestic manufacture. The imports last year exceeded a million dollars' worth. Oader wicker, from which they are made, has been worked by Russian peasants for centuries and was formerly the material from which they wove their houses. The method of cutting, peeling, twisting and manipulating the willow is handed down from father to son.—Chicago Rockford Herald

As She Would Have Been

A gentleman in Paris paid a visit to a lady, in whose parlor he saw a portrait of a lovely woman of, say, five and twenty. Upon the entrance of the lady her visitor naturally asked her if the picture was a family portrait and was told that it represented her deceased daughter. "Is it long since you lost her?" asked the gentleman. "Alas, sir," replied the lady, "she died just after her birth, and I had a portrait painted to represent her as she would have appeared if she had lived until now."

The Disenchanting Phonograph

The best story I have heard recently is that told of a well known Oxford don who was asked to speak into a phonograph. A little later the machine was turned on again, and he was requested to listen to his own voice. The don then turned to the assembled company and said,

"It is strange that through this machine I am made to speak in a particularly hamptons and affected manner!"—London Times

STOP

And think for just one minute. Did it ever occur to you that your family and loved ones might not be as well and comfortably cared for after your death as they are now? This question should be foremost in the mind of every man or woman who has anyone dependent upon them.

The policies issued by the Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Company of Newark N. J., solve this problem most admirably. They contain special advantages and privileges not combined in the policies of any other company, and for nearly 70 years have safeguarded the interests of their clients in a manner above reproach and worthy of recognition by the insuring public. Authorised in 1873 and Commemorated
By the Act of 1887.

A trade dollar is slightly larger than a standard dollar, but it is not current coin, and its metal value is only about 40 cents, though coin collectors will pay 80 cents for it.

So many of these mongrel dollars were in circulation a generation ago that most persons were watchful to avoid getting one, but in recent years they have been so rare that many people never have seen one.

Trade dollars were authorized by Congress in 1873 for the purpose of stimulating commerce with the Orient. For many years the Mexican silver dollar had been a highly valued coin in nearly all far eastern countries. Hundreds of millions of them were shipped to China, Japan, the Philippines and elsewhere in that part of the world to pay for the products exported from Europe and the United States.

America, however, had it that a coin of precisely the same weight and size as the Mexican dollar bearing the imprint of the United States could not be substituted as a substitute for the Mexican dollar.

In the five years beginning with 1873 the United States mint produced nearly 36,000,000 of these dollars. Most of them were exported, but enough of them remained in this country to be embarrassing because of their similarity to the standard silver dollar, and in 1887 Congress provided that for six months thereafter all trade dollars presented to the treasury should be exchanged for standard silver dollars, and after that time the trade dollars were left to shift for themselves, being worth only their metal value plus whatever premium coin collectors might be willing to pay for them. Nearly 8,000,000 of them were redeemed, and when the period for redemption ended only 284,587 of them remained in this country, less than 1 per cent of the number that had been coined.

The trade dollars have on one side a sitting figure of the Goddess of Liberty and on the other an eagle of different design from that on the standard dollar. The inscription is "United States of America, Trade Dollar, 420 grains, 900 fine."

The standard silver dollar weighs 412.5 grains. The weight of the Mexican dollar is 417.79 grains but 27.27 per cent of it is pure silver, so that though it weighs less its metal value is about 7 per cent more than that of the old trade dollar. Probably this is the reason that the trade dollar never made a hit with the people of the far east. There is ground for suspicion that the originators of the trade dollar thought the orientals might be duped into taking it in preference to the Mexican dollar because of its slightly greater weight, notwithstanding the fact that its silver value was about 7 per cent less. But the oriental money changers quickly learned this difference in value, and the deception wouldn't work.

The trade dollar was authorized by the coinage act which became famous under the designation of "the crime of '73" in the free silver agitation which began a few years later and continued for more than twenty years—Kansas City Star.

Dashed His Hopes

At a reception at the Tuilleries the Emperor Napoleon III asked Edouard About if he knew Spanish About, who had been long sighing for an important diplomatic post, answered prudently, "Not yet, sir." But the very next day he went back to work to learn it, and a few months later he said to the emperor, "Sire, I can speak Spanish now." Though the sovereign seemed rather surprised, About continued, nothing daunted, "I have learned Spanish because your majesty asked me if I could speak that language." "Ah, yes," answered Napoleon. "I remember now. I had just been reading 'Don Quixote' in the original and had taken great pleasure in it."

The Eye's Blind Spot

The blind spot in the eye is where the optic nerve comes through the retina about one tenth of an inch nearer the nose than the center. To test it close your eyes with your thumbs outside and held against each other. Extend your arms. Shut your left eye and look fixedly with your right eye at your left thumb. Separate your hands, and when they are about six inches apart the right thumb will go out of business temporarily for its picture will fall upon the blind spot.

Now and again a path or jaws that could easily bite off a man's head.

An alarmed visitor was once reassured by a facetious neighbor of Rosa's, who had observed the strange behavior of the guest who inquired of the fence. "Monsieur need not be alarmed," the neighbor said. "It is only one of Mme. Bo's lions." Monsieur need only be very care not to step on its tail. The tip of the tail is black and one doesn't readily perceive it. It is a small animal like a mousie though I do not know how it would behave if stepped on. One might do well to go on tip-toe."

Rosa Bonheur elected to maintain her lion in her studio as models. Rosa made friends with her felicitous and handling them with feathers etc. At one time she intended to have great pets the friends of her husband and garden at Bois, just as if they had children. This freedom she was later obliged to curtail.

A friend of the great painter used to say that it was necessary to go to the cat collar to arrive expectantly at the gates of the ghetto, so to be held as soon as the batch of visitors had been itself.
